He consulted counsel yes-terday, and the matter will be laid before the police to-day.

FULFIL OR DEATH.

Castellano received on Monday blood curdling letter which had been post marked at the general postoffice in Brooklyn on August 23. It bore neither date nor signature.

Here is a translation of the letter, which was in Italian, with many suggestions of the Neapolitan dialect.

DEAR ROBERT:—With confidence we turn to you as a true signor and a man of means. First of all, you must pardon us if we are so importunate, but our need compels us to disturb you as a wealthy man. Therefere, before every-thing, we demand silence and impose it on you, and if you are so unfortunate as to permit this to be known you will pay

Now, then, we have very much need of $500. This paltry sum is of no interest to you. You will have the goodness to bring the aforesaid sum with you to consign it to the person that will present himself at the City Line (Sea Beach) railroad that goes to Coney Island.

Be sure that you put in your jacket buttonhole a flower, for thus will come to you the person to whom you shall consign the aforesaid amount. If you consign the aforesaid amount. If you do not do all this, command will follow our prayer. Moreover, you will pay the neglect with your life, not only yourself, but all your children, whom it is in our power to spirit away without your knowing aught of their where-

Silence! Fulfil! or death to you and your children!

OTHERS THREATENED ALSO

Castellano is forty-five years old and a native of Sorrento, Naples. He has lived in the South Brooklyn Italian colony ever since he came to America. He is an industrious man, works as a day laborer, and his wife keeps a store. He is secretary of the Principe Napoli Society.

When he received the letter he was somewhat startled. He became convinced that the writers meant what they said, for when he told the story to they said, for when he told the story to some of his acquaintances he received the startling news that he was not the only one who had been threatened. Edoardo Mondaina, a grocer, of No. 44 Union street, and S. Scafidi. a tailor, me as a victim."

He said that there were certain characters infesting the colony who would not hesitate at murder for a moment if it would further their ends. Asked whether he thought his persecutors were members of the Mafia, he said that while he had no way of knowing that they were members of the society he had no doubt that they belonged to a band organized on the same principles. TO WIPE OUT THE EVIL.

When I saw Lawyer Carro he said:— "The Italians will certainly do their utmost to annihilate this band that would be assassins. We shall gladly co-operate with the municipal author-ities and do our best to destroy these people." He knew, he said that threatpeople." He knew, he said that threat-ening letters had been received by other Italians in South Brooklyn within a month. Three victims selected are sup-posed to be persons of means. He dis-credited the existence in the edlony of a branch of the Mafia, but admitted the probability of an organization little better than it. better than it.

BROOKLYN'S ITALIAN COLONY.

The Italian colony of Brooklyn, which partially includes the Sixth and Twelfth wards, is made up of the residents of wants, is made a point the residents of that portion of Union, Sackett, Presi-dent and Degraw streets below Columbia street. It is a densely populated region and the Italian residents are variously estimated at from four thousand to five thousand. The majority of the people are indus-trious, but there are many who neither work nor desire to work. For a long time it has been a problem to the people of this region how these idlers live, and the conclusion suggests itself that per-haps they subsist on the contributions that fear extorts from their silent vic-tims.

unions that they must if necessary draw unions that they must it necessary draw their last cent out of the treasury to push the boycott to the bitter end. The American Federation of Labor and the executive board of the Knights of Labor will be requested to do likewise. The boycott against New York beer is also to be enforced, and resolutions to the effect have been adopted.

One Great Attraction of the Stage.

The question next often asked is: "What attraction has the stage for its followers, that they are so devoted to it?" Yes, we are devoted to it. We respect its antiquity: we admire the position it has gained in the world of art: we are grateful to it for our daily bread. One of its attractions is that it may prove a short cut to popularity. Then, people of other callings transact their business amid more or less dull surroundings and turn to their homes for that which the actor finds at the theatre alone, namely, light, warmth, music, sociability. For my part, I do not believe is a "mute, inglorious Milton." I think that all power demands expression, and the employment of power is a delight. The actor who succeeds feels he pleases his public, and therein finds his own pleasure. When triumph comes to him, it is in so delightful a guiss he cannot help be-What attraction has the stage for its therein finds his own pleasure. When triumph comes to him, it is in so delightful a guiss he cannot help being moved by it. When an author places his book before the public, he must wait; he learns gradually of his success. Not so the actor. His work receives instant recognition in swift, soul-satisfying applause; and what a delicious draught it is! It produces a sort of divine intoxication, that, having once experienced, one longs to repeat. It is curious how an autor and an audience act and react upon one an and once experienced, one range to re-peat. It is curious how an actor and an audience act and react upon one an-other. Sometimes an actor begins his work in the highest spirits, and the coolness, the unresponsiveness of the audience completely crush him. He feels thrown back upon himself, and for the react of the play, however painstakfeels thrown back upon himsell, and for the rest of the play, however painstak-ing he may be, but he will lack natural-ness and spirit. Again, an actor goes to his task in sickness, trouble, or sor-row, or quite unfit for his work, but his audience gives him a warm greeting; his heart responds instantly, his spirits rise, he decides he must do his best to please these generous people; so in try-ing to divert them he diverts himself and all goes well.

"Fenk and Weeble."

"Fenk and Weeble."

A friend of mine had an odd way of mixing her words. Perfectly unconscious of it, she would often make folks laugh. She would speak of feeling "feak and weeble," for weak and feeble, and "castor ill poils," for castor oil pills. But she was weak and feeble until she took that powerful, invigorating tonic, "Favorite Prescription," which so won-liefully imparts strength to the whole system, and to the womb and its appendages in particular. For overworked women, run-down women, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is unequaled. It is invaluwomen generally, Dr. Fierce's Favorite Prescription is unequaled. It is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, exhaustion, prostration, hysteria, spasms and other distressing nervous symptoms, com-monly attendant upon functional and organic disease. the startling news that he was not the only one who had been threatened.

Edoardo Mondaina, a grocer, of No. 44 Union street, and S. Scafidi. a tailor, of No. 112 Degraw street, had also been menaced.

Castellano thought the liest course to pursue to save his money and his head would be to bring the matter to the attention of the authorities, so he placed the letter in the Jands of Francis L. Corrao, a lawyer, who has an office in the Arbuckle Building, in Fulton street. Mr. Corrao will call the attention of Acting Superintendent MacKellar to the matter to-day.

That the threatening letter had great. Ity frightened Castellano was apparent from the nervous manner in which he referred to it when I saw him last night.
